LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

IN ANSWER TO

A resolution of the House of Representatives, of the 11th of January, transmitting the report and tabular statements of the commissioners appointed in relation to emancipated slaves in the District of Columbia.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 16, 1864.

SIR: In accordance with the resolution of the House of Representatives adopted on the 11th ultimo, I have the honor to transmit herewith the report and tabular statements made to me by the commissioners appointed by the President in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act for the release of certain persons held to service or labor in the District of Columbia," approved April 16, 1862, and an act supplementary thereto, approved July 12, 1862.

With great respect,

S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE ACT OF APRIL 16, 1862, ENTITLED
"AN ACT FOR THE RELEASE OF CERTAIN PERSONS HELD TO SERVICE OR LABOR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

CITY HALL, Washington City, D. C., January 14, 1863.

The commissioners appointed in pursuance of "An act for the release of certain persons held to service or labor in the District of Columbia," approved April 16, 1862, hereby, in conformity with its provisions, present their REPORT.

The commission, as originally constituted, met at the City Hall on the 28th day of April, by direction of the President, and proceeded to organize by the election of William R. Woodward, esq., for the office of clerk. The marshal of the District of Columbia was sent for, and promptly appointed a deputy to attend upon the commission, and to execute its processes. A messenger was appointed from the necessity of the case, though not specially provided for by the act, at a salary of sixty dollars per month. Public notice was given through the newspapers of the city of Washington that the commission would meet daily, except Saturdays, in the City Hall, for the reception and examination of petitions for compensation, in which specific directions for drawing the same were given, as well as of the schedule required by the act, to be filed with the clerk of the circuit court. To facilitate the investigation under the act, and as a matter of public convenience, a blank form for the petitions was prepared by the commissioners, which was printed and sold by a publisher.

In these preliminary arrangements for entering upon their labors the commissioners had the benefit of the legal learning and experience of the Hon. Samuel F. Vinton; but hardly were they completed when the relentless hand of death, by a sudden stroke, severed a connexion which promised to be as useful to the public as it was agreeable to his colleagues. He died on Sunday, the eleventh day of May, after a brief illness. The vacancy thus created in the board was filled by the appointment of John M. Brodhead, who entered upon the discharge of his duties on the fourteenth day of June.

By the terms of the act the claimants for compensation were required to file their petitions within three months from the date of its approval. This period expired on the fifteenth day of July. The whole number of petitions presented during this time was nine hundred and sixty-six, and the number of "persons held to service or labor" embraced in the petitions, for whom compensation was claimed, is three thousand one hundred. In order to secure the government against imposition, a complete list of the names of the petitioners, together with those of the servants claimed by them, was made out by order of the commissioners, and published in all the newspapers of the city, as a means of eliciting evidence to rebut claims founded in fraud, or emanating from persons whom the law designed to exclude on the ground of disloyalty.

After a careful investigation they have reported favorably upon nine hundred and nine (909) entire petitions; they have rejected, entirely, thirty-six petitions, and in part, twenty-one petitions, for the reasons which will be found stated in their order. The whole number of servants for which compensation has been awarded is two thousand nine hundred and eighty-nine, and the whole number of servants for whom compensation has been withheld is one hundred and eleven, making a total of three thousand one hundred, included in the nine hundred and sixty-six petitions.

At the threshold of their labors the commissioners were impressed with the importance of having full information as to the value of slaves, independently of that to be derived from the claimants and their witnesses. The law fixes the maximum average of value, within which limitation the commissioners are required to "appraise and apportion" the value in money of the several claims.

There are few persons, especially in a community like Washington, where slavery has been for many years an interest of comparatively trifling importance, who possess the knowledge and discrimination as to the value of slaves which are necessary to a just apportionment of compensation under the law.

None of the commissioners could lay claim to this species of information, and to supply it they determined to summon to their aid an experienced dealer in slaves from Baltimore, Mr. B. M. Campbell, who was at the same time ignorant, in almost every instance, of the individuals upon whose claims he was called to pass judgment. His testimony accorded with that of others whose information in the premises was entitled to weight, that in the disturbed state of the country, since the commencement of the war, it would be difficult to assign value to slaves. The sales have been few, and generally under circumstances of pecuniary pressure which left no discretion with the seller. Slaves, in fact, cannot be said to have had a current salable value since the commencement of the war, while their intrinsic value on the sixteenth day of April, as determined by the undiminished value of the products of the soil, and the undiminished wages of labor, was not less than formerly. Indeed, in both these respects it was greater, since there has been a constant rise of prices, both of labor and of products. The minutes of evidence taken by the commissioners furnish sufficient data to establish an actual value of slaves, in many cases far greater than the allowance of compensation made by the law.

Many families derive their chief, if not their sole, support from the hire of their servants, while the others saved a large annual expense by employing their servants at home. Yet, to make an actual appraisement of three thousand slaves, upon data such as these facts furnish, and in the absence of a current salable value, would have been an almost interminable labor, and the commissioners felt that they could not fulfil the duty assigned to them within the time limited by law, by adopting that mode of valuation. Every appraisement, whether of real or personal property, has reference, as well to current sales as to intrinsic value, the current sales furnishing a convenient standard by which to apportion the value of each object. But in the case before them the commissioners had no such standard; and therefore, as a means of arriving at a fair classification of the slaves, according to their intrinsic utility to their owners, and with a view to the completion of their labors within the time limited by law, they adopted the plan of first classifying the slaves according to their value before the commencement of the war, when sales were frequent, and then reducing these classifications to the average compensation allowed by law.

To prevent all misunderstanding, it is stated distinctly that the values assigned by the expert, Mr. Campbell, were by him referred back to the years 1859-1860. It was not pretended by him that slaves on the 16th day of April last were worth the prices named by him. On the contrary, when interrogated upon oath, he declared that there had been no sales, and that no salable value existed since the early part of 1861. His books, exhibited to the commissioners, show that from February 2 to May 18, 1861, his purchases amounted to thirty-seven slaves, at an average cost of six hundred and thirty-six dollars and seventy-five cents. Of these, four are described as children, but perhaps the greater portion of them were in the prime of life. Since May, 1861, he had ceased to purchase, as all communication with the south was then cut off.

Other witnesses, who from time to time were called upon for their opinions, concurred entirely with Mr. Campbell as to the former and present value of slaves.

The classification thus made was necessary to a fair apportionment of compensation among the claimants, and the commissioners are happy to state that nearly universal satisfaction has been given in this particular. But it must be apparent that the actual amount awarded is not dependent upon this classification. The law has given the commissioners the discretion of fixing the average compensation at any sum not exceeding three hundred dollars. It became their duty to determine what average should be allowed; and upon the grounds stated above, that is to say, the enhanced rather than diminished prices of labor and products, they decided the maximum named in the law. The classification would have answered equally well for any lower rate of compensation.

The table marked A, herewith presented, embraces a complete list of the petitions filed within the time limited by law, with the names of the claimants and their slaves, together with the compensation allowed for each slave, and the aggregate to each claimant. In the table will be found, also, the claims which have been in whole or in part rejected, for the reasons set opposite to them respectively, together with the names of the contestants, where conflicting claims have been presented.

There are four or five cases in which the petitioners have assigned their claims in part, the amount so assigned being awarded accordingly.

In a few instances the slaves were held for a term of years, or for the life of the owner. In such cases the allowances for compensation have been made in proportion to the length of the time and the value of the servant. In like manner, where agreements had been entered into with servants to emancipate them on the payment of a stipulated sum, the amount actually paid has been deducted from the compensation awarded. In several instances claimants held slaves as security for the payment of a specific sum of money. In such cases, if the holder of the reversionary title also claims, the compensation has been apportioned between them. If the latter omitted to claim, the specific claimant alone has been compensated to the extent of his debt. Where slaves have been left by will or otherwise to a person for life, with remainder to children, the award has been made to the owner of the life estate, leaving it to the orphans' court to secure the interests of the children.

No. 686 is the case of Mrs. Mary Throckmorton, who claims compensation for six slaves, under the following circumstances, as stated in her petition: "That your petitioner, the said Mary, acquired claim to the aforesaid service or labor of said slaves in manner following, viz: the said slaves were the property of her husband, John A. Throckmorton, late a citizen of the said District; that said John, in May, 1861, went to the State of Virginia, and engaged in the military service of the so-called Confederate States, where he still remains, leaving said slaves under the care and for the support of said Mary, and of Charles Throckmorton, the only child of said Mary and said John." And further, "that on the 1st of April, 1860, the said John conveyed to Edward C. Carrington five of said slaves first named above, in trust to secure to one Charles Miller the payment of a certain promissory note of that date, for the sum of four hundred and forty dollars, ($440,) which said note has since, by payments at different times made by said Mary to said Miller, been fully satisfied, and the same with said trust deed been assigned by said Miller to Josiah Dent, in trust for the sole and separate use of said Mary."

Filed with the petition is an assignment of the deed of trust by Miller to Mr. Dent, for the benefit of Mrs. Throckmorton, together with the note for four hundred and forty dollars, with an acknowledgment of payment in full upon the back of it, and a deed of release from Mr. Carrington to Mrs. Throckmorton. There can, therefore, be no doubt about the facts involved. After hearing counsel for the claimant, the commissioners unanimously agree in the decision, that as regards the claim set up by Mrs. Throckmorton, as the wife, and in right of a man whom she acknowledges to be in the rebel military service, it has no foundation under the law. As the legal assignee of a loyal citizen, Mr. Charles Miller, the commissioners decide that she is entitled to be paid one-half the value set upon the slaves the sum of four hundred and forty dollars, the amount of the note, together with interest from its date to the present time.

It is due to Mrs. Throckmorton to state that highly respectable witnesses testify to her loyalty, as well as to that of her only son, who is an officer in the military service of the government. These are circumstances which may commend her claim to the liberality of Congress, but they confer no discretion upon the commissioners to set aside the letter of the law in her behalf.

No. 179 is the petition of Mrs. Sarah A. Abbott for compensation for one slave. She sets forth her title as follows: "The said Leah Dorman was born in the service of my father, Dr. John Austin, who presented me with the said Leah Dorman, who was in my service for seventeen years." The commissioners in this case have evidence, and the fact is not denied by the petitioner, that her husband, Charles Abbott, abandoned his home in this District, soon after the commencement of the rebellion, and went to Richmond, or elsewhere within the country occupied by the rebels, in order to join his fortunes with theirs; and that he is now believed to be in the civil service of the rebel government. It is not alleged by the petitioner that the servant was secured to her separate use and benefit, by an ante-nuptial contract, or otherwise, and it follows, of course, that, as a part of her personal property, the slave became her husband's at the moment of marriage. It is maintained by Mrs. Abbott's counsel that the servant was only loaned to the daughter by her father, and that no bill of sale or other conveyance was made; so that the title is still really in the father, to whom the award might be equitably made. This assumption is rebutted by the petition itself, which asserts a gift from the father; and apart from that assertion, seventeen years of undisputed possession would of itself give the title to the husband. The father has made no claim, and the commissioners have decided that no compensation be allowed.

No. 912 is the petition of Mrs. Susan W. Harris, claiming compensation for four slaves. She states her title in the following words:

"The mother of these persons was purchased about the month of October, in the year 1840, by Mr. Arnold Harris, the husband of your petitioner. These persons were all born since their mother came into the possession of your petitioner."

The witness called by the petitioner stated, in reply to a question by the commissioners, that Arnold Harris, the real owner of the slaves, "sympathizes with the south, and now is in the south." It is also a matter of public notoriety that Mr. Harris went south some time after the commencement of the rebellion, and took part in the same. The commissioners, therefore, decide that there is no ground for this claim under the law.

No. 589 is the claim of Jacob G. Smoot for compensation for eight slaves. Mr. Smoot resided in Fairfax county, Virginia, prior to the rebellion, and in the fall of 1861 was induced to remove to the District of Columbia, in consequence of the occupancy of his farm by the United States troops, bringing his slaves with him.

There is no question as to title, but evidence was elicited, on the investigation of the case, that Mr. Smoot voted for the ordinance of secession in May, 1861, and being interrogated on oath, as the law specially authorizes, he admitted the fact. He makes the following statement in relation to his vote:

"I felt that I owed allegiance where I and my property were. There was a small majority, I think, for secession at Lewinsville; I think so; all voted as they pleased there, and I was under no apprehension; there was no restraint, and no armed men there. I voted for secession because I thought it would lead to a settlement; I had no idea of breaking up the Union and government."

Mr. Richard P. Jackson, of Georgetown, a witness called by Mr. Smoot, testified: "I do not know that he voted for secession. I advised him, some time last winter, to take the oath of allegiance; that he was in the power of the government, and if ever the southern confederacy gained supremacy, his title to his property would not be affected. He then consented to take the oath of allegiance. He said he was between two fires. I told him it would do him no harm to take the oath. He thought it was best, as the army was on both sides of him, if he could preserve his property by remaining neutral. I could not discover any feeling either way." It seems, however, that Mr. Smoot subsequently took the oath of allegiance before the military authorities of the government prior to his removal to the District of Columbia.

The vote given by Mr. Smoot, deliberately, and free from constraint, for secession, or the dissolution of the government, the commissioners cannot fail to regard as an overt act of "aid and comfort" to the rebellion. It is therefore decided that he is not entitled to compensation under the law.

No. 386 is the case of Mr. Smith Minor, who claims compensation for seven slaves. His title to the slaves was satisfactorily established.

At the commencement of the rebellion he resided in Alexandria county, Virginia, and was induced to come to the District of Columbia, with his slaves, in September, 1861, in consequence of the active hostilities which raged in his immediate neighborhood, and the waste of his farm, and injury to his house by the rebel armies.

Several highly respectable witnesses testify that Mr. Minor, prior to the day on which the vote was taken upon the secession ordinance, had been thoroughly in sympathy with the Union party; that he was prevailed on by some of his disloyal neighbors and relatives to cast his suffrage for that treasonable measure; and that immediately afterwards he expressed his profound regret for the act, and has ever since continued in faithful allegiance to and sympathy with the cause of the Union. This is the testimony of his loyal neighbors, who voted against the secession ordinance, at the same time and place. In his affidavit, which will accompany this report, Mr. Minor explains his conduct as follows: "That at the election in Virginia, in the month of May, 1861, he gave his vote for the ordinance of secession, so called, under the following circumstances: That he was in favor of the union of the States as they were, and at all times contended that no change ought to be made, and was and still is in favor thereof; but that, without fully comprehending the actual condition of the case, and the effect and bearing of the vote, he was induced suddenly, on the day of the election, and while at the polls, in said Alexandria county, by representations from persons and friends in whom he had been in the habit of putting trust, to believe that said ordinance had been passed by the convention at Richmond, and it was the duty of the people to affirm its acts; and the impression having obtained that the State was out of the Union, by the act of the convention, it was made to appear to him that said vote was to determine the friends and enemies of the State, and not the friends and enemies of secession; that all who voted against the ordinance were to be run out of the State, and made to forfeit their property, and be outcast from home, together with such other threats as induced fears of personal safety."

Mr. Minor makes other averments in apology for his conduct, going to show that "he reluctantly yielded his convictions for the time being." The counsel for the claimant, who was heard at length by the commissioners, contended that the facts above stated, taken in connexion with the advanced age of the petitioner, should excuse him from the operation of the letter of the law.

It seems to be a well-settled principle of law that "threats and menaces which induce a fear of death or bodily harm," "take away for that reason the guilt of many crimes and misdemeanors, at least before the human tribunal." (Blackstone Com., 4, p. 30.) "But then that fear which compels a man to do an unwarrantable action, ought to be just and well grounded."

Therefore, in time of war or rebellion, a man may be justified in doing many treasonable acts by compulsion of the enemy or rebel, which would admit of no excuse in time of peace.

In a note to this passage, Mr. Christian adds: "The fear of having houses burnt or goods spoiled is no excuse in the eye of the law for joining or marching with the rebels. The only force that does excuse is a force upon the person, and present fear of death; and this force and fear must continue all the time the party remains with the rebels. It is incumbent upon men who make force their defence, to show an actual force, and that they joined for fear of death, and withdrew as soon as they were able."

In the case of Mr. Minor, it is not shown that he was in danger of personal harm. On the contrary, he admits that he was influenced by "friends in whom he had been in the habit of putting trust." His fears were remote and contingent, and related rather to the preservation of his property than to the safety of his person. The fact is proven by the witness, summoned on the part of Mr. Minor, that at the election precinct where he gave his suffrage, about two-thirds of the votes were cast against secession. Mr. George Ott Wunder makes affidavit that there were armed men at the polls where Minor voted, and that he (Wunder) voted against the ordinance "under apprehensions for his personal safety, arising from threats made against himself and others that they should be hung by the next day at 10 o'clock." He also states, "there was posted at the polls a squad of rebel cavalry, who, by threats, endeavored to intimidate and influence the voters." The affidavit of Edward Ball states "that, at the election in May, 1861, at which the ordinance of secession was submitted, he gave his vote against said ordinance under apprehensions for his personal safety. Threats of confiscation of property, of ejection from the State, &c., were made by citizens and soldiers. He felt, as he has before expressed it, that he was about to sign his own death warrant; nor did these apprehensions subside until the county was, the day after the election, occupied by the United States troops." The affidavit of Mr. Henry Bailey is to the same effect with the above by Mr. Wunder and Mr. Ball. They present a much stronger case of compulsory threats than those referred to in the affidavit of Mr. Minor. Yet the affiants all voted against the ordinance. Mr. Minor admits that he was persuaded to vote for it by his friends. It is to be observed, also, that the threats were directed at those who should vote against the ordinance; so that the electors, if terrified by them, had still the alternative of absenting themselves, without voting on either side. But, being in the majority, they felt that though there was danger, they could not shrink from meeting it, without justly incurring the charge of timidity, not to say cowardice.

In view of these facts and considerations, the commissioners, after some hesitation and reluctance, decide that they cannot award compensation to Mr. Minor under the act of April 16.

The overt act of giving "aid and comfort" to the rebellion, though committed in a moment of weakness, and apprehension of evil, and against his uniform sentiments of loyalty before and since, lacks the essential ingredient of being the effect of compulsory threats of immediate personal violence, which alone can take it out of the general rule of law, which makes every rational being responsible for his actions. The commissioners, nevertheless, feel that they cannot discharge their whole duty in the premises without recommending the case of Mr. Minor to the charitable judgment of Congress, the tribunal which may, without transcending its authority, mitigate the rigor of the emancipation act in his behalf.

No. 523 is the petition of Edward Owen, "for himself, and as trustee for Dr. J. Owen," claiming compensation for three slaves. The witness, John H. Peters, testified that he knew the servants to be petitioner's; that "they were owned by Dr. Owen, who sold them to petitioner." The petitioner being called and examined on oath, admitted that he had no title nor trusteeship; that the negroes belonged to Dr. J. Owen, who resides near Winchester, and who wrote to petitioner that he might do as he pleased with them. It is clear, therefore, that the petitioner has no shadow of claim for compensation under the law, and none is allowed.

No. 600 is the petition of Anna Cecil for compensation for nine slaves. It was filed by J. H. Peters, now deceased. The claimant failing to come forward to establish the same, notice was sent through the mail to her, and to the witnesses, E. W. Cecil and J. Cornell, whose names are endorsed upon the petition, but no response has been made, and the claim must therefore be regarded as abandoned, if it ever had any foundation in fact.

No. 601 is the petition of Ann Blake for compensation for one slave. It was filed by J. H. Peters, deceased. The commissioners in this as in other cases endeavored to notify the claimant and her witness, John Campbell, through the mail, that her claim must be promptly attended to; but she has failed to come forward, and nothing has been heard from her, and of course nothing has been allowed.

There are a few other cases in which the claimants have failed to appear or to produce the slaves for whom compensation is claimed. They are indicated under the head of "remarks" in the table.

As it regards the question of loyalty, there are but few instances in which the evidence was of a nature to warrant the commissioners in withholding compensation. There are several cases in which there is strong evidence that the petitioners entertained sympathies inconsistent with the idea of a true loyalty. But in the absence of proof that they have borne arms against "the government of the United States in the present rebellion, or in any way given aid or comfort thereto," the commissioners have not felt warranted in withholding compensation, where the law has in other respects been complied with.

The words here cited from the act are contained in the proviso in the third section, the object of which is to declare who shall not receive compensation. They must, therefore, be regarded as intended to explain and define the merely descriptive words contained in the second section. These latter words are as follows: "That all persons loyal to the United States holding claims to service or labor against persons discharged therefrom by this act may," &c.

The words of the proviso to the third section are almost identical with those of the Constitution which define treason. The third section of the third article declares that "treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court."

It is also true that the "forfeiture" provided for in the Constitution as one of the punishments of treason, is similar in its effects to the exclusion from compensation provided for by the act of emancipation.

Under such circumstances the commissioners have felt bound to be governed by the general principles of construction applied by the courts of this country to the third section of the third article of the Constitution, and by the English courts to the statute of treason.

It is to be remarked, also, that this rule for the interpretation of the emancipation act is entirely consistent with the Constitution itself, while a different one, which should entirely confiscate the property of a citizen as a punishment for his unpatriotic sentiments, would be inconsistent with it.

The three cases of this kind, in which the evidence of unpatriotic or disloyal sympathies is most manifest, are those of ladies advanced in years. They were required, like all other petitioners, to take the oath of allegiance and to produce two witnesses to attest their loyalty. The law being thus complied with, and in the absence of any evidence that they had given "aid and comfort" to the rebellion, the commissioners have had no alternative but to make them proportionate allowance of compensation.

By the terms of the act of emancipation, every slave held to service in the District of Columbia was set free on the 16th day of April, and ceased to be under the control of his former master.

Most of them immediately left their homes and sought employment from others: many of them left the District of Columbia to join the service of officers of the army, or to go north. Under such circumstances it would be manifestly unjust to withhold compensation on account of the inability of the claimant to produce the servant before the commissioners.

They have, therefore, first required an oath from the claimant as to his inability to produce his servants, and that he had used due diligence in his efforts to find them, and then received the testimony of competent witnesses as to the age, size, complexion, health and qualifications of such absent servants, and have appraised them upon the description thus furnished, always, however, as a security against imposition, and as an incitement to the claimants to use due diligence, abating something from the appraisement which would be just, if the servants were present and corresponded with the description. The same rule has been applied to the cases of slaves who have died since the passage of the act.

Several claims have been put in for slaves who absconded prior to the 16th of April, 1862. In these cases both the claimants and the slaves were interested in favor of a construction of the act which would entitle the owner to compensation. In some instances the fugitives came back in order to avail themselves of the benefit of the act. But in others this was not the case. The commissioners, after a careful investigation, have decided, that where the owner of the fugitive could give evidence that he had used ordinary diligence to recover his slave, and where the lapse of time has raised no presumption of death, or abandonment, compensation may be allowed.

It is a well-settled principle of law in the slaveholding States, that a slave cannot acquire a residence without the consent of the owner, actual or implied. The home of a fugitive slave, therefore, is, in contemplation of the laws recognizing slavery, the home of his master, or that in which his master had placed him. The decisions on this point in the courts of the slave States are numerous, and are parallel to those of the English and American courts as to the domicile of the wife, which is that of the husband, even though her actual residence is different from his. It would seem to follow from this state of things that, in point of law, the fugitives from the District of Columbia whose legal domicile is here, were set free by the emancipation act of April 16, and that the owners have no longer any right to recover them under the law for the return of fugitives from labor. The commissioners will not cumber their report by the citation of authorities on these points, and content themselves with stating the principles on which they have acted.

But if the fugitives were made free by the emancipation act, it would seem to result, as a matter of course, that the owners are entitled to compensation; and on this ground compensation has been awarded in several instances for fugitives under the limitations above stated. The allowance of compensation for fugitive slaves, whose actual residence and existence are not known as a fact, is based on the legal presumption familiar to the courts of this country and of England, that "when the existence of a person, a personal relation, or a state of things, is once established by proof, the law presumes that the person, relation, or state of things continues to exist as before, till the contrary is shown, or till a different presumption is raised from the nature of the subject in question. Thus, where the issue is upon the life or death of a person once shown to have been living, the burden of proof lies upon the party who asserts the death. But after the lapse of seven years, without intelligence concerning the person, the presumption of life ceases, and the burden of proof is devolved on the other party. (Greenleaf's Evidence, vol. 1, page 48.)

On this rule of evidence the most sacred rights of men are made to turn every day in the courts of law, and the commissioners feel that they have no right to exclude it in the adjudication of claims under the emancipation act. They have, however, allowed no claim where the slave had been absent longer than two years, or where he had not been heard from within a few months.

The effect of a liberal construction of the act in this and the other respects referred to above has been to extend its benefits to several slaves and their owners, who, though within its equity, would be excluded by a narrow adherence to the letter. The commissioners are warranted in acting upon this equitable rule by the highest legal authority; but one citation from Chancellor Kent will suffice:

"Statutes," he says, "that are remedial and not penal are to receive an equitable interpretation, by which the letter of the act is sometimes restrained and sometimes enlarged, so as more effectually to meet the beneficent end in view and prevent a failure of the object." So say all the authorities.

THE SUPPLEMENTARY ACT.

By the second section of the supplementary act, approved July 12, 1862, it was made the duty of the commissioners to investigate and decide the claims to freedom of those persons who had been held to service in the District of Columbia by reason of African descent, for whom compensation had not been claimed by their former owners. To this end such servants were authorized to file a statement or schedule setting forth the facts, with the clerk of the circuit court.

It was also provided by the 4th section of the supplementary act "that all persons held to service or labor under the laws of any State, and who, at any time since the sixteenth day of April, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty two, by the consent of the person to whom such service or labor is claimed to be owing, have been actually employed within the District of Columbia, or who shall be hereafter thus employed, are hereby declared free and forever released from such services, anything in the laws of the United States or of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

The whole number of petitions which have been brought before the commissioners under the supplementary act is one hundred and sixty-one, of which one hundred and thirty-nine have been granted and twenty-two rejected, in the absence of proof, or, more generally, because the evidence made it clear that the petitioner's case was not provided for by the act.

In two cases, after the commissioners had given to the clerk of the circuit court certificates authorizing the issue of free papers to servants, the former owners came forward and complained that they had no notice of the application; that they resided in Maryland, and that the servants were fugitives. On this representation the commissioners consented to rehear the case with notice to both parties. The first of these is that of Charlotte Beckett and her four children, formerly the slaves of Mrs. Mary Bibb. After a patient hearing of both parties by counsel, a majority of the commissioners adhered to the decision by which the certificate was given. Their opinion in the case, together with the dissenting opinion of their colleague, was written out at the time of the rehearing and entered upon the minutes, herewith presented, and offered as a part of their final report.

The other case of this kind was that of Charlotte Brown, formerly the servant of Robert Marshal, of Prince George's county, Maryland. The certificate in her behalf was issued by the commissioners on the 8th day of August on the testimony of Harriet Lent that the woman was the slave of Mr. Marshal, that he hired her in the city before and up to the 16th day of April, and that she was here at that time.

On the 23d day of September the case was reopened on the ground that Mr. Marshal had no notice in the first instance of her petition, and that he denied that she was here with his consent.

Several witnesses were examined for the parties, but the evidence which the commissioners deemed conclusive was that of Mrs. Miller, the lady who hired the servant of Mr. Marshal and paid him the wages. She testified that the woman, Charlotte Brown, had lived with her about a year and six months, and that the last payment was either "the 29th or 30th of April last, when her month was up." Mr. Marshal was present, and admitted that he had received the wages, by which he was estopped from maintaining, in the eye of the law, that she was here against his consent, having actually drawn her wages after she was free.

The commissioners, therefore, unanimously adhered to their decision, that the woman was entitled to her freedom.

Another case similar to the above arose on the petition of Emeline Wedge and her two children, and her sister, Alice Thomas, servants of Alexander McCormick. These petitions were filed on the 16th day of December, and notice was sent to Mr. McCormick by order of the commissioners. In order to insure its delivery, it was put by the clerk in the form of a summons. He appeared two days afterwards, as he said, in obedience to the summons, but declined to have anything to do with the case. He denied the constitutionality of the emancipation act, and said that he would bide his time until it was declared unconstitutional or repealed. However, before the case was determined, viz: On the 22d of the same month, he appeared and made oath, that when he declined to respond in the first instance, it was on the supposition that he would be merely permitted to hear the testimony in behalf of the negroes, without being allowed to produce counter testimony. On this statement he was permitted to put in his plea and to offer testimony.

It appeared in evidence that Mr. McCormick, being a citizen of the District of Columbia and the owner of these slaves, removed them into Maryland a few days before the emancipation act became a law. His farm is immediately on the line, and lies partly in the District of Columbia and partly in Maryland. He built a small tenement a few rods beyond the District line and put the servants in it, while his own dwelling was on this side of the line, together with the cow-pen and whatever pertained to the homestead.

The pasture extended on both sides of the line, as did other enclosures in which the servants were required to labor, but with instructions that they should not cross it into the District of Columbia. It was proven that Alice was required to drive the cattle from the pasture to the cow-pen, under the injunction, however, not to cross the line. It was also in evidence that the daily food of the servants was sent from the residence of Mr. McCormick, generally by some member of his white family; and when it was not thus taken to them, there was no alternative but for the servants to go for it, or to fast. This frequently happened, and they often came across the line to their master's house for the necessities of life.

It was also in evidence that the witnesses had seen the women on the District side of the line repeatedly, in fact almost daily; that they had seen Alice driving the cows to the cow-pen, and into it; and that they had seen them at Mr. McCormick's house repeatedly.

It was also proven that, for seven or eight weeks last past, both the women and the children have resided continually in the District of Columbia, at the house of an old man named Wedge, who is the father of Emeline's husband; and that Mr. McCormick and his family were fully aware of it, and, though objecting to it, he took no steps to have them removed. On two or three occasions Mr. McCormick had sent vegetables from the farm to Wedge's by the women, Emeline and Alice, with directions for him to take them to market. Since the women and children have been living in the District, at Wedge's, Mr. McCormick has been engaged for several days, with the aid of a hired laborer, in plastering the house built on the Maryland side of the line. The house is but one story high, and has but one room below stairs, with a "loft" above. Under such circumstances the house could scarcely be said to be inhabitable. These are the main facts brought out by the investigation; and in view of them, the commissioners unanimously decide that the petitioners are entitled to their freedom.

Table B contains a complete list of petitioners under the supplementary act, with the names of the former owners, and the witnesses called by the parties; also an alphabetical list of persons to whom certificates of freedom have been granted, together with those from whom certificates have been withheld.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS UNDER THE ACT OF APRIL 16, 1862, ENTITLED
"AN ACT FOR THE RELEASE OF CERTAIN PERSONS HELD TO SERVICE OR LABOR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA."

CITY HALL, Washington City, January 13, 1863.

SIR: The commissioners would most respectfully recommend the cases embraced in the accompanying table, marked C, to the equity of Congress. The claimants would be entitled in every respect to compensation, under the act, if their petitions had been filed in due time. That they were not thus filed has been owing to the several causes stated in the evidence herewith presented. In some instances the parties were in Oregon or California, and had not sufficient time, after learning the requirements of the law, to comply with them. In other cases, the parties, either living at a distance, or in Washington, confided their petitions to attorneys, who, by accident or otherwise, failed to file them. In some cases the parties failed to petition in time, from ignorance of the provisions of the law, or of the construction that would be given to it.

The appraisement of the slaves in all these cases has been determined on the same scale of value as that adopted in the report.

We are, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

DANIEL R. GOODLOE,
HORATIO KING,
J. M. BROADHEAD,

Commissioners.

Hon. S. P. CHASE,
Secretary of the Treasury.

WEDNESDAY, October 1, 1862.

The commissioners met pursuant to adjournment. Present: Daniel R. Goodloe, Horatio King, and John M. Brodhead, commissioners; Ward H. Lamon, marshal; William R. Woodward, clerk.

CHARLOTTE BECKETT AND HER FOUR CHILDREN, GEORGE, DAVID, MARY ANN, AND BOHEMIA BECKETT, SERVANTS OF MARY R. BIBB.

October 1. The commissioners make and send to the clerk indorsed on the schedule the following: On rehearing of this case at the instance of the former owner, the commissioners decide, Mr. King dissenting, that it was in evidence that the woman and her children have been in the District of Columbia from the latter part of April last to the present time, and that their alleged owner has made no legal effort to reclaim them, except that a warrant was taken out for their arrest as fugitives, which has never been served nor any effort to serve it proved. The slaves are therefore entitled to their free papers under the 4th section of the amended act approved July 12, 1862; but under the circumstances of the case, the commissioners agree to recommend that compensation shall be made to Mrs. Bibb for the persons thus emancipated.

CHARLOTTE BECKETT AND CHILDREN, SERVANTS OF MARY R. BIBB.

Mr. Commissioner Goodloe files the following as the reasons of the majority in the decision of the above case, October 1.

Application for certificates of freedom under the act supplementary to the emancipation act approved July 12, 1862.

On the 29th day of July, 1862, the following petition was filed with John A. Smith, esq., clerk of the circuit court of the District of Columbia:

“SIR: Mary R. Bibb having claim to the service or labor of Charlotte Beckett, the undersigned, and to her children, George Beckett, David Beckett, Mary Ann Beckett, and Bohemia Beckett, and having neglected to file her schedule or statement in writing as provided in the 9th section of the act of Congress, entitled “An act for the release of certain persons held to service or labor in the District of Columbia,” approved April 16, 1862, you will please file this schedule or petition in pursuance of an act supplementary thereto, approved July 12, 1862. The petitioner files this her petition for herself and her said children, and shows that she and all her said children have resided in said District for more than three years last past, and still reside in said District by the consent of said Mrs. Bibb.”

Then follows a description of the petitioners.

The attorney for the petitioner, on the same date above named, came before the commissioners with witnesses to prove the facts alleged in the petition. They testified that the woman and her children belonged to Mrs. Bibb, and resided with her in Georgetown for four or five years past, and that the servants still reside there. On the following day another witness was produced, and testified more fully to the same effect, and added that Mrs. Bibb had lately hired the servants to Captain Whipple, in Georgetown. Nothing was said by any of the witnesses going to show that Charlotte and her children had been removed beyond the limits of the District of Columbia prior to the passage of the emancipation act, or that they were not here at that time. The certificate in verification of the petition was accordingly ordered, and the clerk of the circuit court issued free papers to the petitioners in compliance with the supplementary act.

Subsequently Mrs. Bibb complained to the commissioners that the certificate had been given on false or erroneous testimony, and that she was ready to prove that her servants were fugitives from Maryland, where she held them in slavery. Accordingly, on the 19th day of September, the commissioners agreed, in consequence of the fact that Mrs. Bibb had not been heard in the first instance, nor been notified of the application of her servants, to reopen the case for a hearing. The slave woman with her witnesses was recalled, and witnesses on the part of her alleged owner were produced and examined.

It was proven by several of these witnesses that Charlotte and her children were removed from Georgetown, in this District, to the county of Montgomery, in Maryland, a few days before the signature of the emancipation act by the President, but after its passage through one or both houses of Congress. It was also in evidence that the servants were in Montgomery county on the 18th day of April, the day the act was approved, and that they remained there some two or three weeks thereafter. These facts were not contested by the petitioner, and the counsel for the mistress insisted that they furnished a clear case in favor of his client, and urged that the certificate of freedom should be cancelled.

On the other hand, it was insisted by the counsel for the servants, that, allowing it to be true that Charlotte and her children were fugitives from service or labor, and that they came into the District after the passage of the emancipation act, they were still entitled to their freedom under the 4th section of the supplementary act. That section is in these terms :

"SEC. 4. That all persons held to service or labor under the laws of any State, and who at any time since the 16th day of April, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-two, by the consent of the person to whom such service or labor is claimed to be owing, have been actually employed within the District of Columbia, or who shall be hereafter thus employed, are hereby declared free, and forever released from such servitude, anything in the laws of the United States or of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

The counsel for the servants insisted that the proof elicited from the witnesses of their alleged owner, as well as from their own, were sufficient to bring their case within the purview of this clause. It was in evidence that the woman and her children had resided in the District of Columbia since about the first of May of the present year, with the knowledge of their owner, without concealment and without any attempt on her part to have them arrested and reclaimed. This was, the counsel contended, in the sense of the statute, an abandonment of claim by the owner, and the slaves were therefore entitled to their freedom.

The counsel for the mistress, in reply, stated that he was prepared to prove that his client had taken the necessary steps to reclaim her servants, and asked for further time in order to bring the evidence before the board. He stated that he could produce a writ issued by the commissioners under the fugitive slave act for the arrest of the woman and her children. He was informed by the chairman that he would also be required to show that an effort had been made to execute the writ, and that the servants were not to be found in the District. Ample time was offered him for this purpose, but he only asked one day.

Accordingly, on the day following, viz : October 1, the counsel for the mistress produced the writ, directed to a constable of the county of Washington, of the date of June 27, 1862. It bears no evidence on its face of having been in the hands of the officer to whom it was directed, or any other having authority to execute it, and no proof was offered to show that it had been out of the possession of the party in whose favor it was issued. It therefore amounts to nothing practically, and cannot be regarded in the light of an attempt legally to assert the claim of Mrs. Bibb to her slaves.

In reviewing the facts of the case as they are sketched above, a majority of the commissioners, Mr. King dissenting, came to the conclusion that substantial justice was done in the premises, although the facts as stated in the petition are not all proven by the evidence elicited in the rehearing. They therefore decided to amend their former certificate by the following:

"October 1, 1862. On a rehearing of this case, at the instance of the former owner, the commissioners decide (Mr. King dissenting) that it was in evidence that the woman and her children have been in the District of Columbia from the latter part of April last to the present time, and that the alleged owner has made no legal effort to reclaim them, except that a warrant was taken out for their arrest as fugitives, which has never been served nor any effort to serve it proven. The slaves are therefore entitled to their free papers under the 4th section of the amended act, approved July 12, 1862."

It is proper briefly to state the reasons which led the majority of the commissioners to this decision.

Mrs. Bibb, the claimant of the slaves, came before them in the avowed character of a person who had attempted to defeat the beneficent purpose of Congress in the passage of the emancipation act. That act was passed for the benefit of the slaves of the District of Columbia, and at the same time care was taken that no pecuniary loss should fall upon the slaveholders. In disregard of this humane object of the legislative power, she conveyed her slaves out of the District of Columbia after the passage of the bill through one or both branches of Congress, but before it had been approved by the President. She can therefore claim nothing more than the strict letter of the law will give her. Equity and humanity are against her, as well as the spirit and purpose of the law.

The majority of the commissioners have felt bound to consider the case from this point of view as well as upon the established maxim that in every conflict between freedom and slavery, the presumptions are to be on the side of the former, just as a man is presumed to be innocent until he is proven on unquestionable testimony to be guilty.

In legal effect, Mrs. Bibb took no steps to reclaim her slaves. The evidence is that she was aware that they had taken up their residence in the District of Columbia as early as the beginning of May, and it was not until the end of June that she resorted to her only legal remedy, viz: a writ issued by the circuit court, or, after their appointment, by the commissioners under the fugitive slave act.

She cannot allege her personal efforts to entice the negroes back into slavery as proof that she had not abandoned a claim to them. If she had succeeded in recovering them by that method, it would have been their own affair, and no one could have made complaint. But she could not have seized them by herself, or her private agents, without incurring a heavy penalty, since, by the first section of the emancipation act, every human being in the District of Columbia must be presumed to be free until the contrary is shown by legal proofs, as prescribed in the fugitive slave law. As has been stated above, she entirely neglected the exercise of her legal remedy until the 27th day of June, when she obtained a writ from a commissioner, under the fugitive slave law. Up to that date she had permitted the slaves to remain here unmolested, with her knowledge, and therefore with her consent, for nearly or quite two months; and if for two months, why not two years? The terms of the fourth section of the supplementary act specify no time as evidence of the abandonment of a claim of service. It is sufficient that the negro is employed here with the consent of the owner; and that consent must be presumed when the owner or claimant neglects to use his legal remedy, after being made aware of the residence of his slave in this District.

Any different construction of the law would render the emancipation act a practical nullity. The slaves actually liberated might remain free, but the District of Columbia would still be overrun with slaves "held to service or labor" in the adjacent States of Maryland and Virginia.

The first section of the act of April 16 declares, first, "that all persons held to service or labor within the District of Columbia by reason of African descent, are hereby discharged, and freed of and from all claim to such service or labor." This is the first clause of the section. Its effect is to set free every slave who was held to service or labor in the District on the 16th day of April.

But this is not all. The second clause proceeds to declare: "and from and after the passage of this act neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except for crime, whereof the party shall be duly convicted, shall hereafter exist in said District." It must be obvious that this clause was essential to the exclusion of slavery from the District of Columbia. Without it the slaves who were here on the 16th day of April might have maintained their liberty, but there would have followed an immediate influx of slaves from the adjoining States to supply their places, and the slave code would have remained in full force to maintain the authority of the owners. Even if the supplementary act, which is merely declaratory of the meaning of the original, accompanied with specific remedies for the rights which the original act guarantees—if this supplementary act had never been adopted, the courts would have been bound to act upon its spirit in order to maintain the District of Columbia forever free from slavery.

On any other theory of construction the second clause of the first section of the act of April 16 would have remained a dead letter.

It is contended by the counsel for Mrs. Bibb that her failure to assert her claim to her slaves arose from the fact that the civil officers whose duty it would be to make arrests of slaves are deterred from the exercise of their functions lest they may be brought into collision with the military authorities.

It is not for this board to admit or to act upon an assumption that any department of the government transcends its authority. But if it be well founded, we have no right to withhold from the slave the resulting right to freedom consequent upon the owner's failure to assert her claim; and she must look to the legislative power to indemnify her by pecuniary compensation.

CHARLOTTE BECKETT AND CHILDREN, SERVANTS OF MARY R. BIBB.

Hon. Horatio King presented the following:

I dissent from the decision of my colleagues in the case of Mrs. Bibb's servants, Charlotte and children, for the following reasons:

These servants petitioned for their freedom as having been held to service and labor in the District of Columbia at the time of the passage of the act of April 16, 1862. They brought witnesses to prove, and were understood by the commissioners to have proved this fact, and the certificate thereof was accordingly made to the clerk of the circuit court, upon which he issued free papers.

Mrs. Bibb denied that they were in the District at the passage of the law—claimed that they were mere fugitives from Maryland to the District after its passage, and asked to be allowed to show by the same and other witnesses that the certificate of the commissioners was erroneous and should be revoked. This request was granted, and it was clearly proved that, instead of being here as represented at the passage of the act, they were actually fugitives as contended by Mrs. Bibb.

But it is held by my colleagues that if not entitled to freedom under the second section of the act of July 12, 1862, they are under the fourth section of said act, as servants escaped into and employed in the District of Columbia by consent of their owner since April 16, 1862. This last issue I do not consider to have been fairly tried; and before free papers are granted to the petitioners under this fourth section, I think a new petition should be presented (setting forth the fact that they did escape from Maryland into the District of Columbia, and that the claimant should be allowed to show whether or not they have remained and been employed here by her consent.

HORATIO KING.
